

The Dean of Northeast Forestry University (NEFU) School of International Education and Exchanges (China) made a courtesy visit to our graduate school and exchanged views with our Dean and Vice Deans about educational and research exchanges of professors, researchers, and students in the future (Sep 20, 2019).

Meeting on the occasion of the courtesy visit.

Dean Tsuchikawa and Dean Luo

Group photo

Northeast Forestry University (NEFU) is a large Chinese university with more than 24,000 students enrolled. It is located in Harbin (Heilongjiang province), has colleges associated with agriculture, engineering and humanities including colleges of forestry, forestry engineering, wild life resources, life science, information technology, mechanical and electrical engineering, civil engineering, economics and management, law, etc. Dr. LUO Ying, the Dean of NEFU School of International Education and Exchanges (SIEE), and Mr. SHEN Tengda, a staff member of the administration office of SIEE, made a courtesy visit to the Graduate School of Bioagricultural Sciences (GSBS) and exchanged views with our Dean, Vice Deans and others about future educational and research exchanges (Sep 20, 2019). Since there has been no experience of exchanges between NEFU and GSBS, we agreed that it is necessary to first establish exchanges of professors and researchers between a specific NEFU college(s) and GSBS and then we develop student exchanges later.